KEYNOTE SPEECH

Candidates For Public Offices
On Program. Banquet
Held At 6 O'clock.

Meeting of the present political campaign held in county was staged Saturday night at the Green Castle hotel. The enthusiastic Republicans, out in goodly numbers to Arthur R. Robinson, United States senator, who is seeking re-election and Frederick E. Schortemeier, secretary of state, who is a candidate for the nomination for governor. Other speakers included Mrs. E. Watson, Mrs. Grace B. Robinson, secretary of state and a candidate for re-election, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Schortemeier.

Charles McGaughey, president of the court room with Republicans and Democrats interested in the election, the primary a week hence. The meeting, a dinner at about 100, was given at the hotel. Both Mr. Schortemeier and Mr. Robinson spoke briefly. Mr. Schortemeier said this election by default, in that out of 10 people will vote and only 51 out of 100 will vote in the election. The stay at home and criticize of those who go to the of his stewardship of the secretary of State was made evening by Frederick E. Robinson, Republican candidate for "Four years ago I the people of Indiana a good of the office of Secretary of State," said Mr. Schortemeier. "I am pleased to have the to report to the people as activities. Believing in economy turned back to the tax-payers thousands of dollars might legally have been Mr. Schortemeier.

other details, all of them in good government, my earnest and continuous. We can best judge the future of Indiana if I am elected of Indiana I pledge the most efficient administration that office which I have to give in the state during the last four years."

Robinson, said in part: "The past five years the Republican have been assailed by Democrats in connection with the, and from all that has one might be led to believe of the Democratic party are entirely blameless, pure and is not in accord with the is true that some few Republicans temporarily entrusted with were false to the principles of the party. It is also true that now and have not been years, connected actively public affairs. It is also the rank and file of the composed of millions of honest, God-fearing Americans who are in novice responsibility of the misdeeds of a very few in the party.

must be speedily improved. The utmost importance to our welfare that the American given a square deal and the opportunity to succeed that is those engaged in other in. Recognizing the plight of in America, the Republican adopted by the last convention of the party, prom-disputes the existence of a problem today. The mortgage of the farm interests in the have increased from $4,000, in 1910 to more than $12, in 1925; and it is common that during the last seven years wheat, corn, cotton, hogs, and farm products have frequently sold for less than the cost of production. What the American farmer needs today, therefore, is an opportunity to develop bargaining power that will assure him prices for his crops and commodities that will give him a fair return on his investment and labor. To gain this and it is necessary to control crop surpluses, make the tariff effective on those commodities where duties are provided for, and to provide a system of orderly marketing for all crops.

One thing is certain, all of us live from the farm. Our clothing comes largely from the farm; our food comes from the farm; and while we might do without many so-called necessities of life, we can not get along without food. We must eat to live. We must eat off the farm, and if we do not get our food from the American farm it must come from foreign quarters.

Because I believe it to be by far the best plan suggested, I have supported the McNary-Haugen bill, with voice and vote, and shall continue to do so.

Another problem staring us in the face is flood control. The great Mississippi and its tributaries, affecting twenty states or more, Indiana included, must be effectively harnessed to the end that great areas be not laid waste and thousands of people made homeless. I feel sure it will be worked out successfully by the present Congress.

Our national defense must be adequate. The American navy should be the equal of any in the world. We have thousands of miles of coastline to protect in time of emergency, while the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Panama Canal Zone look to us for security.

Besides, our foreign commerce is now equal to that of Great Britain and soon will be greatly superior. I am anxious to see the time come speedily when American commerce will be carried in American ships so that we shall not be dependent on competitors bottoms to carry on our world trade. For all these reasons, and others too numerous to mention, we must have a navy entirely commensurate with our national policy.

There has been too much immigration into this country, and it must be further restricted. Indeed there are increasing signs that the restriction should be applied to Mexico on the South and Canada on the North. Those who come to our shores too, should be given to understand that they are expected to become real Americans leaving their foreign allegiances behind them.

Following the admonition of George Washington, I have voted to keep America free from entangling alliances with other lands. This line of action I shall continue to follow.

Not only have we reduced the national debt approximately one third since our party came into power, but we have consistently reduced taxes at the same time. In line with this policy, Congress will pass another tax reduction bill at this session, in my opinion, and I shall of course support this program as I have in the past.

The Constitution of the United States including the 18th Amendment is the rock on which our liberties rest, and we will exchange it for no other. But it must be observed and enforced, and all the laws enacted under it. Not only by those who come from other lands, but by our own native born as well. Any other line of conduct would result in anarchy, and in the end national destruction.

In this primary contest, I have tried to conduct a clean, high grade campaign. This I shall continue to do. If the Republicans of Indiana desire me to remain in the Senate I shall be glad to serve and be everlastingly grateful to them. I shall cheerfully abide by their decision, however, and no matter what may happen, will support the ticket next fall with my whole heart and soul. I shall always be a Republican.

DR. HUTCHESON WRITES LETTER WHILE ON TRIP

DR. AND MRS. W. R. HUTCHESON
ON WAY TO HONG KONG, FROM MANILA.

WRITE INTERESTING LETTER

Letter Tells of The Many Interesting Experiences They Have Been A Party To.

A letter was received from Dr. W. R. Hutcheson Saturday and was written while Dr. and Mrs. Hutcheson were on their way from Manila to Hongkong.

The letter was as follows:
On our way from Manila to Hongkong, March 28, 1928.

My last letter to you was when we were on our way from Java to Singapore, what a location in the Malay states, Singapore has a very large and beautiful harbor, being a gateway and stopping place for all boats going east and west. We had a very pleasant visit here stopping at the Roffelo Hotel. Our visit was very interesting and instructive as here are great rubber tree plantations and rubber factories. The roads are good and automobile transportation perfect. The city of Singapore reminds you of one of our larger cities. The street traffic cops have large boards on their backs that direct traffic and to change the direction of the traffic, the policemen simply shift their bodies.

We also found here a trackless trolley car, a street (electric) car on rubber tire wheels. Now the time is not lost as the cars can be run around traffic and avoid any congestion. I have taken pictures of all of these things and will be able to show you all of the things that we have seen. After four days of traveling we were brought to Siam; the Resolute anchored 25 miles from shore and we were taken ashore in the small tenders. After two hours sailing we landed at a small place called Poknam, then we were taken by electric cars for twenty miles in land through jungles and rice fields and districts to Bangkok our destination.

Now Siam is the only absolute Monarchy in the world and has been ruled for the past two years by a young man who is up-to-date having graduated from Oxford College. He is doing great things for his country. He has only one wife, his grandfather has over three hundred, his grandfather had thousands of them. You can see that he has had a vision. He has given the people a compulsory education and everyone is working and happy. Here is where rice is grown to supply the world.

The king's palace is one of the most beautiful buildings we have ever seen. It is all built of white Italian marble and was started ten years ago, by his father and completed by his brother. The throne seat occupied by former kings was made to set flat upon, but the present king has a large arm chair out in front that he uses. That night we witnessed a dance given by the girls that entertain the king. The dancing costumes were the most gorgeous we have ever seen, all gold and beset with jewels. They danced until they fell from exhaustion, mostly due to the heat. Most every place that we have been since we entered the Red Sea and tropical countries was the worst for heat, but here we reached the climax, when we came to the hotel for our lunch the thermometer registered 91 degrees and when we left in the afternoon it registered 123 degrees. Siam is a wonderful little country and I am at a loss to know why some grabbing country did not get her long ago.

On our way to Borneo, the second night out, one of our party, a beautiful young woman, age twenty-six years, alone, opened the port hole in the stateroom and disappeared in the deep blue sea.

I promised some of the girls at home that I would bring them a wild man from Borneo but have failed to keep my promise, as upon landing at Tarakaw, I saw a picture which I will send to you. When they were bringing men in about my size, tied to poles, minus their heads. So I will keep to the well beaten path. I think I know what makes the wild man of Borneo wild? It is because he lives in Borneo.

Our next stop at Zamboanga Sulu was a surprise. Being one of the Philippine group our Uncle Sam is doing wonderful things for them. The younger folks most all speak English and what a difference from any we have seen. They have boy scouts, everywhere to help and act as guides. Y. M. C. A., Country Clubs, etc. The good old stars and stripes were floating everywhere, it certainly did look good. After two days sailing we came to Manila Bay and harbor and docked at one of the best docks in the world.

The pier at which we landed made us think that we were coming to a real city and we were not disappointed. The board (of natives) that greeted us is the one that took second prize at the St. Louis World Fair and my what music they did render. We were received by Governor Stinson, and served punch and cake, not punch, next door to the governor's palace, a brewery, where they gave it away free to the tourist. (The Volstead Act does not apply to the Philippines.) While the rest of the tourists were visiting the brewery, Mrs. Hutcheson and myself called upon vice-governor Gilmore, who graduated from DePauw and studied law with the late J. P. Alice and we enjoyed our visit very much. He wished to be remembered to his relatives Eugene and Miss Margaret, and other friends.

In the afternoon John F. Maxwell, Y. M. C. A. secretary in Manila came with his car and we had a most wonderful

TAYLOR AND RAPHAEL GIVE GOOD SERMONS

PASTORS DELIVER STRONG SER-MONS TO GOOD CONGREGA-TIONS SUNDAY MORNING

SPECIAL SUBJECTS CHOSEN

Dr. Taylor and Rev. Raphael in Two Churches Speak On Interesting
Topics.

"A Thrilling Story of Great Achievement" was the subject of Dr. Taylor's sermon yesterday morning at the Methodist Church. He related briefly the story of Nehemiah's rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem, as related in the book of Nehemiah, the fourth chapter, then pointed out the psychological factors involved in this remarkable achievement. First there was individual concern; Nehemiah carried the whole matter as a great burden upon his own heart. Then followed group cooperation; the burden was distributed, the eager desire was shared with others. Then followed organization for action; unorganized desire is little more than purposeless ferment. The opposition which was developed by success was met by a fearless pressing of the enterprise toward completion, a weapon in one hand and a tool in the other. Nehemiah put the explanation of the achievement into a single sentence. "So we built the wall, for the people had a mind to work."

Great accomplishments at any time and in any place come not to pass by accident. They are not the issue of happy conjunction of circumstances, but rather of individual initiative and group cooperation. Some one must first get the matter upon his heart until it becomes a veritable agony. This burning desire must then be communicated to the group until they become motivated by the same desire and purpose. All of this passion to achieve must then be organized into effective methods of procedure. Time was when the great Methodist Movement which has now encircled the globe was only a burning passion in the heart of John Wesley, who insisted, "The world is my parish." He fairly agonized with the desire to raise up a holy people unto the Lord. He was able to communicate this desire to a group around him, and the Methodist Movement was set going in the world. It has been otherwise with every great religious movement in the history of mankind.

"What the people want, they get," said Dr. Taylor. This fact is strikingly evidenced in the abolition of slavery in the United States and the more recent enactment of federal prohibition. When the anti-slavery agitators, such as William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, and Harriet Beecher Stowe had awakened the Northern minds to a passion of desire to see the accursed institution abolished, the necessary forces had been set in motion for the achievement of that great victory. When those praying women of the early temperance crusades in Ohio had succeeded in imparting their passion for the destruction of the American saloon to the temperance people north and south, a prohibition movement was set going in this country which did not rest until the Eighteenth Amendment had been written in the national constitution. If the people of any community can be aroused to really want a high type of religious life, and expression in their community, they will get it. They will get what they want.

"What the people get, they will have." You can not well foist upon a community something they have not desired nor gone after. Neither has a community the right to expect something of worth which it has made no effort to get. If we are to have better homes in this community, it will be because the people want better homes and go about it to get what they want. If we are to have better churches in this community, it will be because the people want better churches and set about it to build them. If we are to have a Christian Sabbath in this community, it will be because the people want such a Sabbath, and go after it.

"What the people have, they are." If they have a community which everywhere shows signs of indifference and neglect, they are at once marked as a people lacking in community interest. If their homes are dingy and neglected, no more evidence is required to convince one of their lack of domestic concern. If their schools are of an inferior sort and the buildings that house them dirty and drab, that is evidence enough that here is a people utterly lacking in educational interest. If the church is the most neglected public building in the community, with broken window lights and battered doors and leaky roof, it will be hard to convince even the casual observer that here is a people who love the Lord devoutly. For it is forever true that what the people want, they get; what the people get, they have; what the people have, they are.

MEN OF FAITH

At the morning service in the Presbyterian Church, Rev. V. L. Raphael spoke on the subject "Men of Faith." The basis of the message was suggested by 2 Timothy 2:2—"The things which thou hast heard from me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." I welcome the occasion which forms an integral part of this service, because of the opportunity it affords of ex-

PER CAPITA DEBT IS $24.66 FOR PUTNAM

HARRY MIESSE PREPARES STA-TISTICS OF INTEREST FOR COUNTY.

AVERAGE TAX IS $19.86

Taxes Go Up And Down But Mostly
Up Report Shows. Taxpayers
Should Study Problem.

The per capita debt of Putnam county is $24.66 and no matter how loudly a citizen of the county may boast that he is out of debt, he still owes approximately that much by reason of outstanding obligations. This conclusion, and others relating to Putnam county's finances, were reached by the Indiana Taxpayers' Association after a study of the county's tax problem. An analysis of the situation made by Harry Miesse, secretary of the association, shows also that the per capita tax paid by every citizen of Putnam county is $49.86.

Mr. Miesse's compilation begins with 1918 when the total taxes collected in Putnam county, for all purposes, amounted to $641,549. By the following year the total had gone up to $701,068, an increase of 9.27 per cent. For 1920 there was an increase of $183,355, or 26.15 per cent, bringing the total taxes up to $884,423. In 1921 collections amounted to $910,516, an increase over the previous year of 2.95 per cent. The year 1922 showed an increase of $1,814, or .459 per cent. In 1923 there was an increase of $223,763, or 25.49 per cent, then tax collections began to decrease so that in 1924 the total collected was $1,036,520, a decrease from 1923 of 11.79 per cent. The county's taxes went down 9.26 per cent in 1925 the total collected being $940,473. For 1926, there was a decrease of $34,784 making the total $905,689. Last year the collections were $991,244. That was an increase of 9.44 per cent over 1926. The increase over 1918 is very great.

Putnam county's outstanding debt at the end of 1926, which is the most recent period for which figures are available, was $490,263. This was divided as follows: county, other than roads, $74,000; county unit roads, none; township road bonds, $103,871; township school bonds and loans, $134,606; civil city and town debt, $111,460; school city and town debt, $166,326. The 1927 valuation of Putnam county taxables was $34,290,855. The total debt is 1.43 per cent of that amount. Although the constitution limits municipal debts to two per cent of the total taxables, the courts have held that various units of government are meant by that limitation, thus the school city may run up a debt to two per cent, and the civil city may do the same thing.

"The object in setting forth these figures," said Mr. Miesse, "is to arouse an interest among the people of Putnam county in their own affairs. They will see that their taxes have gone up and down, mostly up. There has been a big increase since 1918, the county owes almost half a million and the per capita debt as well as the per capita tax are too high. Where taxes have been reduced one year it is safe to assume that too much was collected the year before. When the total goes up again it is the best thing to investigate and learn the reason. The increases may be justified by emergencies or vital immediate needs but so many times it happens that taxes are higher because the people are listless and pass the buck to the few officials who have the making of the budgets and the levies. Taxes are held down consistently only where the taxpayers organize, study their budgets in the light of public needs and demand not only economy but full value for every dollar of their money that the public officials spend."

COL. LINDBERGH FLIES SHIP TO WASHINGTON

ING. ANNOUNCED PLANS
LATE SUNDAY.

ENDS SHIP'S CAREER

The "Spirit of St. Louis" Has Been Flown A Distance of Approximately 40,000 Miles.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Apr. 30. (UP)—The most famous plane in the world with the most famous aviator at the controls took off from here today on probably its last flight.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh "Gave The Gun" to his beloved "Spirit Of St. Louis" at 9 A. M. soared aloft from Lambert Field and headed for Washington where he will turn the plane over to the Smithsonian Institute.

Col. Charles H. Lindbergh announced in St. Louis Sunday night, that he would fly the Spirit of St. Louis to Washington on Monday. The famous airship will be placed in the Smithsonian Institute. The flight to Washington will end the forty thousand miles career of the "Lone Eagle's" plane.

The Spirit of St. Louis has traveled in all of its flights a little more than forty thousand miles, Col. Lindbergh said.

"It is in practically perfect condition mechanically," he said. "The ship has been inspected a number of times and nothing materially wrong was found."

The flight to Washington will mark retirement for the monoplane which to millions of people has taken on the aspect of a personage. Col. Lindbergh's modesty and his attachment to the ship caused him to refer to himself and the plane as "we" when he returned from his New York-to-Paris flight.

Since Feb. 19, when it swooped down out of the fog at the end of the South American tour, the monoplane with the flags of South American countries painted on its fuselage has stood virtually deserted in a National Guard hangar.

Its only company was a guard, who as a precaution against souvenir hunters, allowed no visitors to come near. A peep through the hangar door was all that visitors were allowed. The ship is said to have been photographed more times than any other plane in existence, and Col. Lindbergh's friends say it has had more pictures taken than any other inanimate object in the world.

FAMOUS TRIO HONORED BY NEW YORKERS

TRANS-ATLANTIC AIRMEN GET ROUSING WELCOME IN BUSY GOTHAM.

NEW YORK, Apr. 30. (UP)—Ten years after the end of the great war between Germany and the Allies, two former German soldiers and an Irish veteran of the allied air forces paraded in peaceful triumph through the streets of New York today.

While hundreds of thousands cheer their passing and millions more listened in on the celebration by radio, Baron Gunther Von Huenfeldt, Maj. James Fitzmaurice and Capt. Hermann Koehl were carried along the route where the eighty-ninth division and General John J. Pershing were feted when they returned from war.

Flags of the United States, Germany and the Irish Free State were unfurled for the three men who were first to complete a westward airplane flight across the north Atlantic Ocean a feat that won them a reception such as New York alone knows how to bestow upon her visiting heroes.

Some of the 10,000 United States soldiers and sailors who took part in the greeting may have projected their minds back to the days of 1918, but former animosities were forgotten.

New York turned out in mass to honor the aviators. Lower Broadway from the battery to ninth street was packed with people. Fifth avenue as far up as Central Park was crowded from curb to building fronts. The program for the Bremen fliers was even more elaborate than the one arranged for the homecoming of Lindbergh last summer.

SYNOPSIS

Lured from his beat by a letter from his brother, Dicky, while bandits again raided the Dayton silk warehouses, Danny Malone is discharged from the police force in disgrace. Jimmy Wells, a reporter working on the robbery case, advises him to go into hiding. Jimmy and Danny's sweetheart, Mary Gilen, are both confident of Danny's innocence of neglect of duty and are determined to clear him. Mary is employed in the office of Alfred Dayton, Jr., whose father is threatening to shake up the police department unless the bandits are captured. Mary and Jimmy suspect young Dayton of working with the ruffians and in the hope of obtaining evidence against him, Jimmy proposes that Mary accept his offer to go with him to a night club.

When Mary came down the short flight of steps from her home the truck was a couple of hundred feet down the street, and immediately it quickened its pace. As she passed it swung wildly towards the left hand side of the road as if the driver were looking everywhere but ahead. Instantly it was pulled back onto a straight path, but Jimmy had seen enough, so he sprinted out from his hiding place and managed to make the running board as it rattled past.

Opening the door, he calmly crawled in and seated himself. "Was Danny, as he had guessed, and in spite of the friendship that had grown up between them he did not seem to be very welcome. Danny kept quiet and waited for him to speak.

"Say, Malone," Jimmy grinned. "I didn't give you credit for so much sense."

"What do you mean?" growled the other.

"Why, doing this. You've got a great chance of picking up some news of the silk warehouse doing this. What kind of a firm are you working for?"

"I'm not working. I'm through," and Danny glared straight ahead of him.

"Why, man, you're crazy. This is one of the best breaks you've ever had. In your present condition you'll be welcome in every gang in New York and if you don't pick up some clue in the near future we're still out of luck."

"You mean you still want to work with me?" asked Danny.

"Don't be crazy, man," answered Jimmy. "I don't know what your reason was for leaving post, and I don't want to know. All I mean is that I think you're square and if you want to clear this damn thing up I'm with you."

"Jimmy, you're a prince." Danny was on the point of telling him the real reason when a pick lumber truck swung across them and in the ensuing confusion the subject was forgotten.

"I've got to go now, Danny. Take my telephone number and let me know anything that may be helpful. By the way, tell me where you're living and for God's sake change to a trucking firm that isn't so respectable. See you soon."

Jimmy was gone and Danny felt a few of his old spirits returning. If Jimmy believed in him maybe Mary would and if they could only clear this thing up it still wasn't too late to alter things.

That night he quit the firm where he had found work and on the advice of a little Irish driver went to see a man who, as Paddy said:

"Maybe won't talk so much about what he wants you to do, and he'll pay you plenty for doing it. Tell him I sent you."

Danny found the Larson Trucking Company, and noticed that the five big trucks in the yard appeared to be built for speed sooner than for utility. At first he was unable to find anyone to talk to, then he noticed a little office in the corner of the yard and going over found a big black negro porter over a late copy of the Graphic.

"Anything doing around here?" he asked.

"Well, big boy, Ah'm de boss her," bouts an Ah'm thinking 'd'ah sint."

"Paddy Ryan sent me over and told me you would have plenty for me to do. Sure you ain't got any thing?"

"Okay with me, I'll be around."

space that was not filled by the five speed wagons that he had seen in the yard was taken up by small wooden cases and bundles wrapped in burlap. A strange smell pervaded the atmosphere and as if that were not enough, one of the cases had been opened and its white-capped contents placed on an upturned box.

So Larson was a bootlegger. For a moment Dan thought of going back. On top of the recent developments to be arrested as driver of a liquor truck would mean a sentence. He guessed that it was only the scandal that was saving him now and as soon as the police got anything definite on him he would get a short and effective shift.

Then he realized that this would be his only chance of helping Jimmy. He couldn't help grinning. Not a month ago he landed on the force through his unaided efforts, was acclaimed a hero, given a great chance for advancement, thrown out of the cops, and now he was a bootlegger. All in a month.

With a grin he accosted the huge negro who was leaning against the tailboard of a truck.

"Which one is mine?" he asked.

"Dis one, big boy. Shed dat coat ob you'n an' wraide dese things aboard."

Dan found that his truckmate was to be a tall, good natured young Irishman whose twinkling eyes told of the reason he was in this game.

"Lo, buddy," this gentleman remarked, "looks like a heavy load for us tonight... no, catch hold of 'em this way."

In ten minutes the truck was loaded and Danny sat at home with his companion. Larson had been watching them, and seeing the wholehearted way in which he piled the boxes and bundles aboard he decided that his latest acquisition was a good one.

The other fellow's name was Murphy and before the truck pulled out he went over to Larson to get his final instructions.

"Say, kid," he remarked when he came back, "it's not as bad as it looked. We've only got two places. The Orange Grove up on 135th and the Red Mill on 99th. I don't know the last place but I've been to the Harlem joint before. Wow, what a wild dive!"

Danny wasn't very much interested after he found that his route led him up town. There was little chance of seeing anything useful up there, nevertheless he was interested and listened while Murphy poured out a wild story of the wild doings at the Harlem clubs.

"Say buddy," he finally remarked, "you must think I'm an apple knocker if you expect me to swallow that stuff. Ain't we got a police force in town?"

GOLFERS ARE BUSY

Sunday was a fair day for the early golfer and a number were on the course at the Country Club for the first time this spring. The course was said to have been in fair shape.

The club is getting ready for its grand spring opening during the next few weeks, or as soon as the weather settles and the greens are in shape for use.

A Boyce-ite Fueled Motor Runs Sweet Because It's Clean

The Boyce-ite ingredient which makes Boyce-ite Blu-Green Gasoline the wonder-fuel it is, is not a "carbon remover." It prevents carbon from forming.

It is true that this gasoline used continuously over a long period will gradually clean a carbonized motor, and keep it clean. The best procedure in cases where motors are now clogged with carbon, is to have the carbon removed and then adopt as your standard fuel Boyce-ite Blu-Green Gasoline.

Lincoln—the Hoosier

(Number 6 of a series)

The old cathedral at Vincennes, one of the last bits of Indiana seen by Lincoln as he crossed the Wabash for the Illinois shore in 1859. It still stands.

LINCOLN got his first sight of a printing press in Vincennes. He saw the old cathedral when, as a young man past 20, he left Indiana to go with his father to the neighboring state. The foundation of Lincoln's future greatness already had been laid. This was in 1859.

Fourteen States—20 Cities in the United States—have Lincoln Memorials—Indiana has none.

erful sight seeing ride as he knew the exact places to take us to see the real native life, from coal-fighting pits to markets, etc. Mr. Maxwell is a cousin of our late Harry Maxwell, and he is doing a good work here. When we came back to the ship we found large bouquets of Lotus flowers sent to every Mason and wife on board from the Scottish Rite Mason Lodge of Manila.

We are now on the largest thing in the world, the Pacific Ocean, and will reach Hongkong, China, this afternoon, March 28, where we will be for three days stay at Canton, three days at Formosa, three at North China, Pekin, three at Korea, ten days in Japan, and then to Honolulu. So far this has been a wonderful cruise. I have missed but one meal since I left home and have enjoyed every minute of the trip.

alting the Church of Jesus Christ. The ordination and installation of elders and deacons which we have just observed centers our attention upon the Church organized for worship and service. As the mind travels back in memory to all those who have held these offices, including the trustees, during the century and more of its history, there is a feeling of deep gratitude to them. They were men who loyally stood by the Church, who sought to preserve its peace and unity even at the cost of self, who gave generously of time, strength and money to propagate the Gospel, and who defended the faith against the onslaughts of evil. The debt we owe them is incapable of estimation and impossible of payment. Perhaps after all the only recompense they would care to consider is the "Well done" of the Heavenly Father and on part a desire to perpetuate their faith. We gladly salute these noble warriors and answer "By the grace we will."

The Church is primarily a spiritual institution. Its first considerations, therefore, have to do with porship, the winning of souls to Christ, the nurture of its membership, and the interesting of its constituency in extending the boundaries of the kingdom of God. To carry out this large program requires not only a minister to direct and lead, but groups of men set apart as officers to help bear the burden of responsibility. The Apostles stipulated many qualifications as essentials to these because of the nature of their tasks. Chief among them is that around which this is gathered—men of faith.

No man would be able to serve the Church who was not a firm believer in Christ, nor would he be acceptable as a teacher of others. Christianity as an institution occupies its present position because of those who have been exponents of the faith. This has in turn found expression in loyalty to the cause of Christ. "No man can serve two masters." The Church claims the wholehearted support of those especially who are charged with its government. Faith knows no discord or lack of harmony. Rather it is a great unifying force. These are charged with "the preserving of the unity of the faith in the bonds of peace." This is not a difficult task, because each man submerges in order to secure the well-being of the majority.

There is one more element in faith that is exceedingly important—sacrifice. It often costs tremendously to be true to the faith. Officers of the Church are sometimes unfairly criticized for their views on what is best for the organization's good. They have often been persecuted by the very members who promised to follow their guidance and uphold their hands.

More Than Arms and Legs

H. Gordon Selinger, one of the world's largest merchants, says in his book, "The Romance of Commerce."

"There is so much more to the employee than arms and two legs. There is the spirit of enthusiasm and earnestness and 'I will' which means more to the employer than ten pairs of arms and legs. Loyalty is a quality to be earned by the employee from the employer and only earned by fair, generous treatment."

These are the views of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana)—views which it has expressed consistently. By all the means known to enlightened modern business, this Company has endeavored to earn and hold the loyalty of its employees.

The Industrial Relations Plan, the Death Benefit, the Annuity Plan and the Employee Stock Purchasing Plan are concrete expressions of its desire to give employees "fair, friendly, generous treatment."

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is a human organization—made up of 27,010 human beings. These men and women are not considered merely as working units—so many arms and legs—so much mind and muscle. Each is an individual who makes his contribution to the enormous capital of human effort necessary to carry on the work of the Company.

All men are equal in the opportunities they enjoy in this Company. There is no place in the organization out of reach of the man with the ambition and the ability to fill it.

This democratic policy has developed a smoothly running, efficient organization in which every man's ability is utilized to best advantage, in which every job is done by the man best qualified to do it.

In addition, this policy promotes a feeling of friendly cooperation among employees. Men in responsible positions have consideration born of actual experience for those lower in the ranks.

Men in the lower ranks have respect for those higher up because they know that their men have earned the right to their responsibility.

As a result, a friendly helpful spirit prevails among employees. They are bound together by mutual appreciation and by a profound loyalty to their Company.

The spirit within the organization is reflected without and it is this spirit that is fundamental to the success of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

The Red Crown diars pepping the Mobile West have won their friendly welcome among motorists not by their shape or color, but because of the spirit behind them, the spirit of thousands of men and women who work with enthusiasm, satisfied only when they have done their best.
